Nation-building, nature, cultural identity, and the ties that bind them.

It's time to discard those rose-tinted glasses. To discern the complexities regarding the shaping of the nation's identity and cultural landscape from historical exploitation and environmental degradation. The underlying influences that have persisted through time, seeping into every nook and cranny. Anas brings up an important aspect of the realities behind nation-building; the deforestation of nature in paving the way for monoculture farming. As per the artist, the belief in a harmonious and romantic relationship with nature is something people subconsciously agree upon. Nevertheless, it is a mere superficial 'branding' effort to mask environmental destruction. This agricultural practice has led to significant environmental destruction, and the displacement and endangerment of native species. Despite efforts to conserve wildlife and promote sustainability, the damage done is profound and ongoing. Oil palm plants have been depicted as part of the narrative of 'progress' from a pre-modern subsistence economy, Anas uses it to serve as a metaphor for the nation's action; perpetuating the colonial practice of objectifying the natural world as something to be defeated and exploited. This particular plant appears quite frequently in his body of work. Harking back to the history of how oil palms first arrived in South-East Asia; a result of the British colonial administration. It is hard to deny that the westernisation and industrialisation of a nation are part and parcel of nation-building. Regrettably, Malaysia's cultural identity, closely tied to its natural environment, is being eroded as traditional practices and symbols are replaced by those linked to colonial and capitalist influences.

The work is placed between two bookends. The first is the profound affinity and the admiration for the diversity of the natural world. The second, is the current sense of mourning for the loss of that diversity due to humanity's destructive nature, both of which he is also part of. Concerned that without a shift in values and a more genuine appreciation of the environment, Malaysia will continue to lose its cultural distinctiveness, leading to a homogenised and diminished national identity. As always, Anas' work consistently provides a subtle perspective on the interconnected and evolving relationship between the natural world, historical narratives, and cultural identity, encouraging reflection on its influence in modern society.

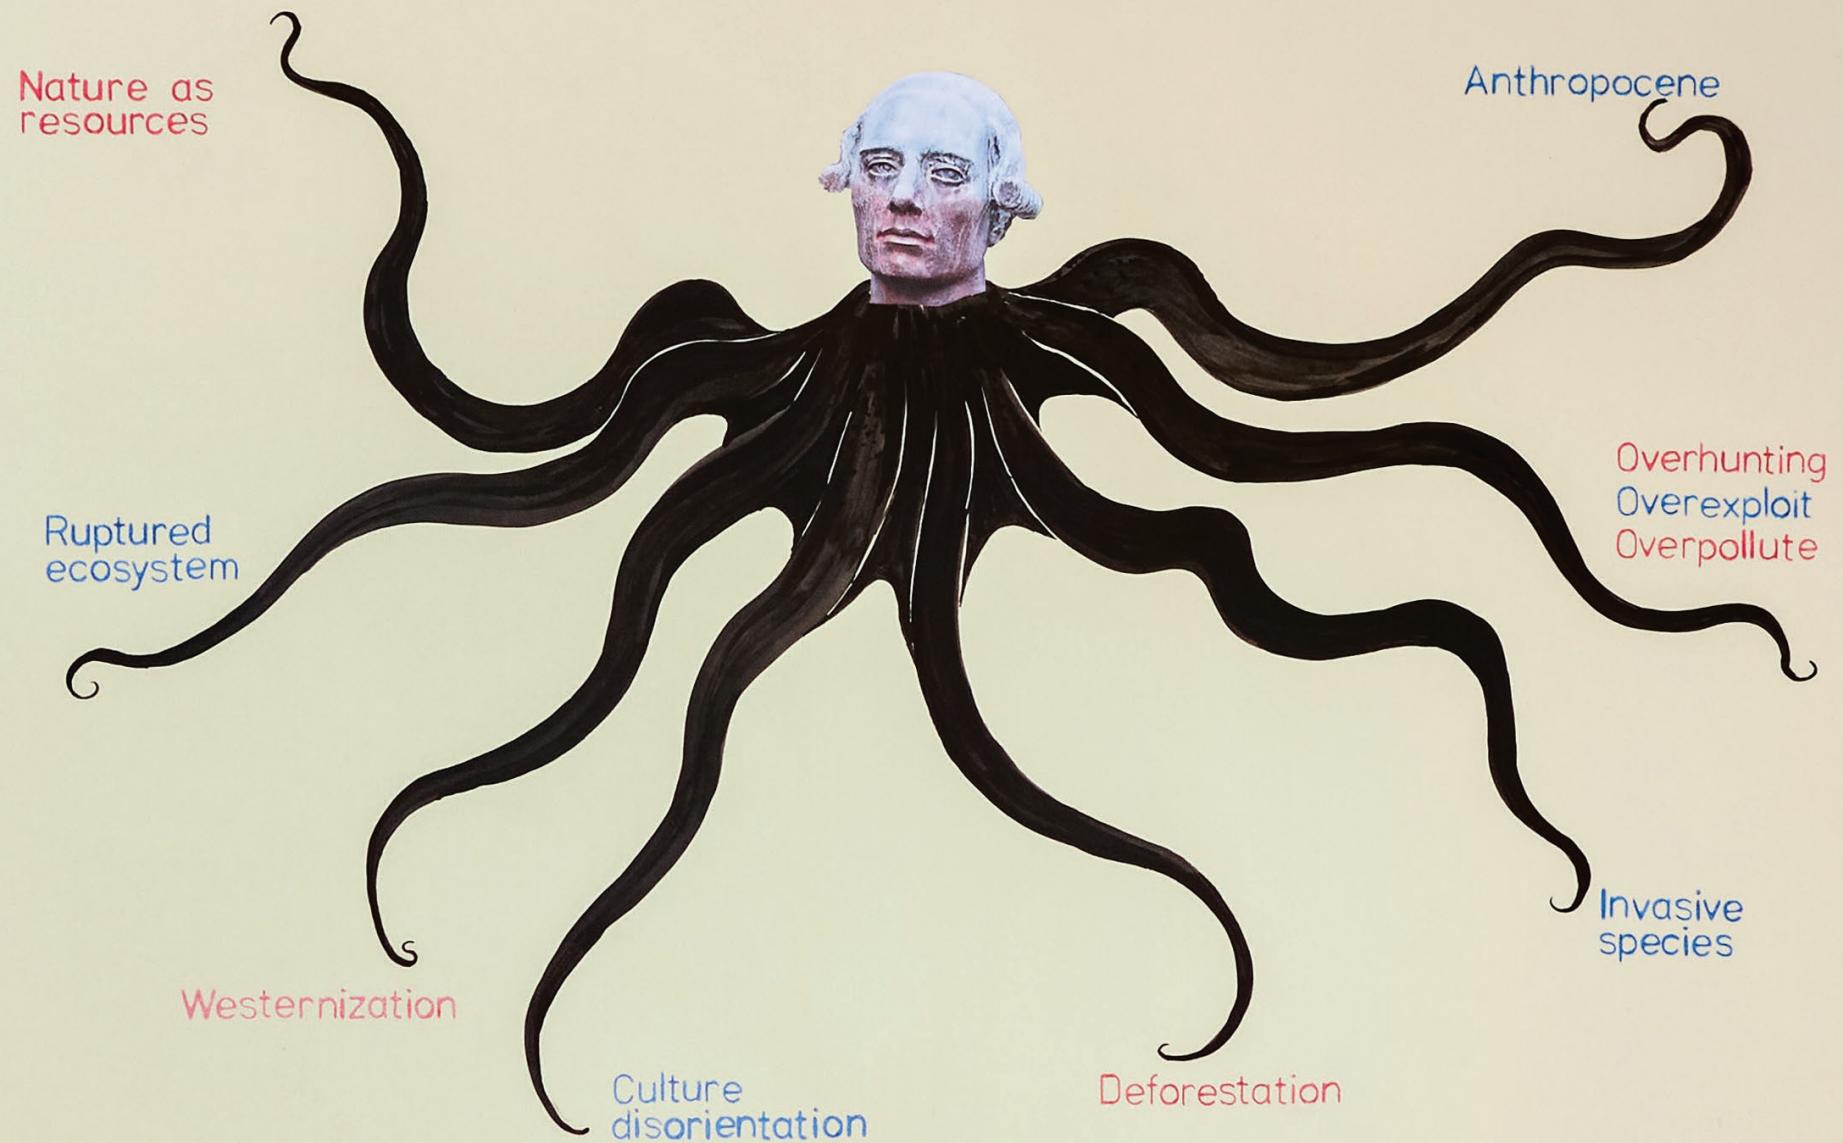

Pembinaan negara, alam semula jadi, identiti budaya, dan hubungan yang mengikat mereka. Kini, masa untuk menanggalkan ‘cermin mata berwarna merah jambu’. Dalam zaman sekarang, kita perlu mengenal pasti kerumitan dalam pembentukan identiti negara Malaysia dan lanskap budaya daripada eksploitasi sejarah dan kemasuhan alam sekitar. Pengaruh penjajah yang telah lama wujud terus meresap ke dalam setiap sudut. Anas menyingkap satu aspek penting mengenai realiti di sebalik pembinaan negara; penebangan hutan untuk membuka jalan kepada pertanian monokultur. Menurut artis ini, kepercayaan dalam hubungan harmoni dan romantik dengan alam semula jadi adalah sesuatu yang dipersetujui secara tidak sedar oleh masyarakat. Namun, ia hanyalah satu usaha ‘penjenamaan’ untuk menutup kemasuhan alam sekitar. Amalan pertanian tanaman yang dibawa oleh penjajah, seperti kelapa sawit, telah menyebabkan kemasuhan alam sekitar yang ketara, serta mengakibatkan pemindahan dan ancaman terhadap spesies asli. Walaupun terdapat usaha untuk memulihara hidupan liar dan mempromosikan kelestarian, kerosakan yang telah dilakukan amat mendalam dan berterusan.

Pokok kelapa sawit telah digambarkan sebagai sebahagian daripada naratif ‘kemajuan’ daripada ekonomi sara diri pra-moden, dan Anas menggunakan pokok ini sebagai metafora untuk tindakan negara; meneruskan amalan kolonial yang melihat alam semula jadi sebagai sesuatu yang perlu dikalahkan dan dieksloitasi. Pokok ini muncul agak kerap dalam karya beliau. Kembali kepada sejarah bagaimana kelapa sawit pertama kali tiba di Asia Tenggara; hasil daripada pentadbiran kolonial British. Sukar untuk menafikan bahawa pembaratan dan perindustrian adalah sebahagian daripada pembinaan negara. Malangnya, identiti budaya Malaysia yang berkait rapat dengan alam semula jadinya semakin terhakis apabila amalan dan simbol tradisional digantikan dengan yang berkaitan dengan pengaruh kolonial dan kapitalis.

Karya ini diletakkan di antara dua tanda buku. Yang pertama adalah ikatan mendalam dan kekaguman terhadap kepelbagaian alam semula jadi. Yang kedua adalah rasa kehilangan terhadap kepelbagaian itu disebabkan oleh sifat manusia yang merosakkan, di mana Anas sendiri turut menjadi sebahagian daripadanya. Beliau bimbang bahawa tanpa perubahan nilai dan penghargaan yang lebih tulus terhadap alam sekitar, Malaysia akan terus kehilangan keunikan budayanya, membawa kepada identiti nasional yang seragam dan semakin berkurangan. Seperti biasa, karya Anas sentiasa memberikan perspektif halus mengenai hubungan yang saling berkaitan dan berkembang antara alam semula jadi, naratif sejarah, dan identiti budaya, menggalakkan refleksi terhadap pengaruhnya dalam masyarakat moden.

ABOUT THE ARTIST ANAS AFANDI

Anas Afandi (b. 1991, Malaysia) is a Kuala Lumpur-based artist whose practice spans drawings, paintings, sculptures, and installations. His work offers nuanced perspectives on the interconnectedness and dynamic relationships within the natural world, historical narratives, and cultural identity. Prompting contemplation on their impact on contemporary society.

Drawing has always been the cornerstone of Anas' practice. His works explore the boundaries between art and life, fact and fiction, as well as, design and function. Often drawing from his personal experiences and memories, Anas believes that art should be deeply personal and closely tied to its creator. Constantly evolving, as the artist evolves through life's experiences and emotions. By reflecting his experiences in his artworks, Anas is able to question the role of art in human life.

The conceptual underpinnings of his work are rooted in his close relationship with nature, a connection established during his upbringing in a familiar natural environment. His interests in history, archaeology, and botany often inform his art; with the environment serving as the foundation for his work. Anas views himself as a vessel, channelling ideas derived from this foundation, with the resulting artwork becoming a fusion of both the artist's touch and the environment's influence.

Anas has participated in several group exhibitions, including Interwoven Realities at HARTA Space, Kuala Lumpur (2024), WLG Ignite by Wei-Ling Gallery at GMBB, Kuala Lumpur (2021), WLG Incubator Young Artist Show at Wei-Ling Contemporary, Kuala Lumpur (2020), Drawings Matter at HOM Art Trans, Kuala Lumpur (2019), and SH/FT: A Contemporary Art Show at White Box, Kuala Lumpur (2019).

MAKLUMAT ARTIS ANAS AFANDI

Anas Afandi (lahir 1991, Malaysia) ialah seorang artis yang berpangkalan di Kuala Lumpur, dengan karya yang merangkumi lukisan, catan, arca, dan pemasangan. Karyanya menawarkan perspektif yang mendalam mengenai hubungan saling berkaitan dan dinamik antara dunia semula jadi, naratif sejarah, dan identiti budaya, serta mendorong renungan tentang pengaruh mereka terhadap masyarakat kontemporari.

Lukisan sentiasa menjadi asas kepada amalan seni Anas. Karyanya meneroka sempadan antara seni dan kehidupan, fakta dan fiksyen, serta reka bentuk dan fungsi. Sering kali, karya Anas dilahirkan oleh pengalaman dan kenangan peribadinya kerana beliau percaya bahawa seni harus bersifat sangat peribadi dan rapat dengan penciptanya. Seni baginya sentiasa berkembang, selari dengan pengalaman dan emosi yang dilalui sepanjang kehidupan. Dengan mencerminkan pengalamannya dalam karya seni, Anas dapat mempersoalkan peranan seni dalam kehidupan manusia.

Asas konsep karyanya berakar pada hubungan rapatnya dengan alam semula jadi, ikatan yang terbentuk sejak zaman kanak-kanaknya dalam persekitaran semula jadi yang biasa. Minatnya terhadap sejarah, arkeologi, dan botani sering mempengaruhi karyanya, dengan alam sekitar berfungsi sebagai asas untuk hasil seninya. Anas melihat dirinya sebagai saluran yang menyalurkan idea-idea yang berpunca daripada hubungan ini, di mana karya seni yang dihasilkan merupakan gabungan antara sentuhan artis dan pengaruh alam sekitar.

Anas telah menyertai beberapa pameran kumpulan, termasuk Interwoven Realities di HARTA Space, Kuala Lumpur (2024), WLG Ignite oleh Wei-Ling Gallery di GMBB, Kuala Lumpur (2021), WLG Incubator Young Artist Show di Wei-Ling Contemporary, Kuala Lumpur (2020), Drawings Matter di HOM Art Trans, Kuala Lumpur (2019), dan SH/FT: A Contemporary Art Show di White Box, Kuala Lumpur (2019).
